

Laurentine's seeds of hope

When Laurentine Ounane's husband passed away, she became the sole wage earner in her family. As a seed farmer in Burkina Faso, her income was largely dependent on a short rainy season, leaving her with little income the rest of the year to support her family. Providing food and other basic necessities for her young children was difficult.

In Burkina Faso, your gifts to the ELCA World Hunger Appeal are implemented through Lutheran World Relief (LWR) and its local partner Venegre. Laurentine is a member of Venegre, a cooperative of seed producers. With better tools, storage, and training on how to market their product, farmers like Laurentine are realizing significant increases in profits, providing much-needed income to support their families.

"In this region it's not possible to find an activity this good," says Laurentine, "that will pay you so well for three months of labor." Laurentine and the other members of Venegre are able to send their children to school, buy food and other needed items, and survive the dry season.
