

Giving opportunity for Brazil:

Lutheran Education Expansion

Project Description

The Lutheran Institute for Education at Parecis is a parochial school of the Evangelical Church of the Lutheran Confession in Brazil. The Institute is located in the town of Compo Novo do Parecis in the state of Mato Grosso. This town is a new “farm” development in north-central Brazil very close to the Amazon region and the Parecis people.

The school seeks to meet the educational needs of this community and also of the neighboring Parecis people. The school has been in operation since 1996 and it seeks to expand the program to include a “high school” curriculum.

Your contributions will help build facilities for a library and two laboratories chemistry and biology and comply with regulation from the Ministry of Education.
